Is Captive Insurance Simple or Complex?

YES!

Simply stated, Captive Insurance is insurance. So how is it complex? Understanding potential moving parts such as lines of coverage offered, different types of Captives availability, ownership of your captive, parties involved, investment of Captive assets, re-deployment of assets, and knowledge and understanding of how all these and additional variables work together may be either simple and / or complex.

Here are some examples of different components of Captive Insurance companies:

Insurance

Simple: First, last, and always Captive Insurance is insurance and part of a business's risk management program. Premiums are paid, claims are made when a loss occurs, and paid when coverage is in place.

Complex: There are over 65 different exposures which can be underwritten. The unique nature of your business allows personalized selection of coverages most important to you.

Ownership

Simple: Ownership of your captive can be as simple as an LLC.

Complex: Your current and future structuring, goals and relationships create multiple opportunities of how and where in your organizational chart your captive should be owned.

Investment

Simple: Your insurance company assets should be managed for desired return and risk tolerance. These funds are your insurance company assets and must be invested as such.

Complex: How, when, and where these assets are managed are critical as compliance is much more complex than typical investment accounts. If it were simple, your investment advisors would have introduced this solution to you.

Re-deployment of assets

Simple: Captive surplus may be distributed in the future at long-term capital gains rates.

Complex: There are advanced re-deployment opportunities in a variety of ways dependent on sequence, timing, and proper compliance.

Turn-key process

Simple: A turn-key process from education, implementation, maintenance, and eventual shut down is in place.

Complex: Time, pressure, priorities, and understanding can make the turn-key process seem more complex than it is.

Teamwork

Simple: It takes a well-oiled machine to create an insurance company. Each member of our team should be part of your team. These teams are coordinated together by experience, knowledge and a collaborative mindset. It's our expertise. Our team includes administrators, legal, investment, actuaries, underwriters, and most importantly – you the business owner.

Complex: Lack of communication, transparency and action disrupts the team limiting the effectiveness of each member.

Captive Insurance is simple and complex as well as a very powerful solution! Captive Insurance is a solution to complete your risk management program, a solution to retain more earnings, a solution to solve long-term financial goals, incentives, and intentions. Captive insurance simply is
